

Content

List of Abbreviations	9
1. Introduction	11
1.1 Aim and framework	11
1.2 Methodology and structure	19
2. Institutions and Institutionalism	27
2.1 Institutionalism as a framework for an analysis of Capitalism	27
2.2 Institutions: a definition	34
2.3 American Institutionalism	42
2.3.1 The methodology of American Institutionalism	42
2.3.2 The analytical tools of American Institutionalism	44
2.3.2.1 Evolutionism and holism	44
2.3.2.2 Pattern models	50
2.4 Institutional change	55
3. Network theory	65
3.1 Social network theory	65
3.1.1 Social capital	65
3.1.2 Networks	71
3.1.2.1 Corporate networks	77
3.1.2.2 Regional networks	79
Excursus: embeddedness and trust	80
3.2 Network organization	84
3.2.1 Flexible specialization	84
3.2.2 Concepts of regional networks	87
3.2.2.1 Neo-regionalism	87
3.2.2.2 Innovative milieus	89
3.2.2.3 Cluster	92
3.2.2.4 Industrial districts	94

4. Capitalism: definition, history, typology	103
4.1 Capitalism since the 19 th century – derivation and rapprochement	103
4.2 Max Weber’s definition of Capitalism	113
4.3 Werner Sombart’s approach to “Modern Capitalism”	122
4.4 Confucian Capitalism?	131
4.4.1 A brief summary of the main principles of Confucianism	131
4.4.2 Max Weber’s assessment of the relation between Confucianism and Capitalism	134
4.4.3 The significance of Confucianism for Chinese Capitalism	140
4.5 Varieties of Capitalism and China	146
4.5.1 The Varieties of Capitalism approach and China	146
4.5.2 Other typologies of economic systems	151
4.5.3 The economic style approach	156
 5. Chinese development since 1978	 161
5.1 The Chinese notion of development	161
5.1.1 Development – a definition	161
5.1.2 Transformation: big bang versus gradualism	165
5.1.3 A brief recapitulation of the Western industrial revolution	168
5.1.4 History and current state of China’s economic development since 1978	175
5.1.4.1 Economic reforms since 1978	175
5.1.4.2 Current state of economic development	182
5.1.5 Reform without a theory	187
5.2 The role of the family for economic development in Europe	191
5.2.1 A short outline of the traditional household before the industrial revolution	191
5.2.2 The transformation from traditional household to capitalist economy	196
5.2.3 New institutions as precondition for economic development	204

5.3	The role of the family for economic development in China since 1978	207
5.3.1	Chinese family structures before the Cultural Revolution: the ‘obstacle view’	207
5.3.2	Chinese family structures since 1978: motor of economic development?	214
6.	Chinese Capitalism: Guanxixue	221
6.1	A definition of Guanxi	221
6.1.1	A general definition	221
6.1.2	Traditional Guanxi: the rural Rénqíng gift economy	228
6.1.3	Guanxi as evolving institution	233
6.1.4	Modern type Guanxi: the urban art of Guanxi and business practice	239
6.2	Guanxi versus corruption	245
6.3	Guanxi from a gender perspective	248
6.4	The specificity of Guanxi networks	256
6.4.1	Networks and the German Mittelstand	256
6.4.2	The Third Italy	262
6.4.3	The blat of Russia	266
6.4.4	Guanxi networks versus Western forms of networks	272
7.	Capitalism, the private sector and Guanxi in the 20th century	277
7.1	The development of the private sector since 1978	277
7.1.1	The development of the Chinese private sector and the role of entrepreneurs	277
7.1.2	Types of Chinese enterprises	292
7.1.2.1	Public sector	292
7.1.2.2	Private sector	296
7.1.3	The Chinese private sector: definition and some data	298
7.2	Case Study: Wenzhou	303
7.2.1	A short summary on Wenzhou’s location and history	303
7.2.2	Wenzhou’s rise after 1978	304
7.2.3	Wenzhou’s performance since 2008	309

8. Guanxi, entrepreneurs and the state	315
8.1 The bourgeois entrepreneur, networks and the state	315
8.2 Entrepreneurs and the state in China	322
8.2.1 Entrepreneurs and the state	322
8.2.2 Role of jurisdiction in China	339
9. Concluding remarks and main findings	347
9.1 China's development process and institutional change	347
9.2 The Chinese notion of development: future and perspectives	355
9.2.1 The role of family and networks	355
9.2.2 The private sector and the state	359
9.3 A new type of Capitalism? Towards a definition of Guanxi Capitalism	365
References	375